While older mice use a small ball on the bottom to control the cursor, newer ones use a laser. Some computer mice instead have a large ball on top of the mouse so that instead of moving the mouse across a surface to interact with the computer, the user keeps the mouse stationary and instead moves the ball with a finger. The Logitech M570 is one example of this type of mouse.

Reggie the Mouse : questions

I'm looking for help to display a text "hidden" behind another text when the mouse passes over it, in a circle following the cursor. I found a solution with mix-blend-mode and CSS masks, however, this solution lets both texts appear in the circle according to the chosen colors (see below with black and purple) and I want only the purple text to be displayed in the circle.
